A winner of the Edgar and McCavity awards for mystery writers and a former chapter president of the Southern California chapter of the Mystery Writers of America, Hirahara, who lives in Pasadena, is perhaps best-known as the author of the best-selling Mas Arai series, featuring a grouchy Japanese American gardener with a penchant for gambling and a talent for solving crimes. Like many who endured the hardship and humiliation of the one of the darkest chapters of U. Paperback - USED Good Condition.

Mystery at Manzanar: A WWII Internment Camp Story by Eric Fein

Some of the Japanese American people in the camps absolutely hated the people running the camps and anyone who seemed to work for them or get along with them were considered traitors to the cause. Tommy sets out to solve the crime and discovers some unlikely suspects. Kazue Matsumura said her mother, widowed at 43, worked two or three jobs, according to the oral history she gave Manzanar.

Bay Area woman gratified by ending of WWII 'ghost' story

Earlier in the day, the men had discovered a pile of bones beneath Shepherd Pass, where a herd of migrating deer had plummeted to their death two years earlier on a steep, icy slope. The gravesite wasn't mapped, so his final resting place has been a mystery that for years has captivated hikers who searched fruitlessly for Matsumura's remains. A: Yes, that really reflects the exodus of the 120,000 Japanese Americans who were incarcerated in the 10 camps, which were located either in the desert or in swamps.

Pasadena's Naomi Hirahara explores treatment of Japanese Americans in 'Clark and Division'

Because Aki is trying to sort out what happened to her sister, it forces her to explore and do things she would never normally do.
