The Hartford Convention and the Treaty of Ghent

In the consideration of this amendment, it is not necessary to inquire into the justice of the present war. Nay, have continued, notwithstanding countless charges and accusations, any one of which would have amounted to a gross desertion and sacrifice of the welfare and interests of the State and Union, still to lead blindfold and muzzled this deluded people- eight years, fellow citizens, of bondage and servitude! Seven from Connecticut, four from Rhode Island, twelve from Massachusetts, two from New Hampshire and one from Vermont.

But a severance of the Union by one or more States, against the will of the rest, and especially in a time of war, can be justified only by absolute necessity. Significance of the Hartford Convention The news of Jackson's overwhelming victory and the end of the War of 1812 was greeted with jubilation by the nation.

The Hartford Convention or Leap no Leap

Finally, if the Union be destined to dissolution, by reason of the multiplied abuses of bad administrations, it should, if possible, be the work of peaceable times, and deliberate consent.

Though this idea was rejected, it was the first time the idea of secession seriously arose in American history. One of these acts denied the First Amendment right to freedom of speech when it prosecuted citizens who voiced or printed slanderous attacks on the president or government. In the end, the convention just called for constitutional amendments limiting the power of the Presidency.
