How early American inventors funded their ventures

Production of coal in the United States grew from 14 million tons in 1860 to more than 500 million tons in 1910, and high explosives did much of the heavy lifting. Phillip Heath-Coleman, Independent Scholar Abstract: In the past Walter Map's tale of Gado, included in his De Nugis Curialium, written towards the end of the twelfth century, has been merely regarded as a Medieval Latin version of a pre-conquest lay concerning the exploits of the Germanic hero Wade. This paper covers the earlier part of the chronicle, from the middle of the fifth century to the later part of the seventh.

Big Bang

Big Bang

His early experiments were financed by his father; later, he made money by performing a traveling show using the recently-discovered phenomenon of nitrous oxide, also known as laughing gas. It was the first new commercial explosive since engineers had begun to use traditional gunpowder in mines in the seventeenth century. Eight signers of the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776, were foreign-born, more from Ireland than any other country.
