Working With Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Families

May reflect on how own attitudes and beliefs are different from those of other cultures and communities, but does not provide evidence of planning for instruction that can meet the needs of diverse learners. One objective of the series is to foster a sense of community and connection among educators. Volunteering at a school fundraiser, for example, may be seen as less valuable to some families than receiving information on how to work with their child at home on reading or math.
