In August 1862 we sent out invitations to all our agents and correspondents, for the supply of whatever data they possessed, respecting their several districts. In the partidos of Buenos Ayres we found it difficult to collect the various minutiae to be desired in a Hand-book: being obliged to content ourselves with meagre and imperfect reports, we do not claim for this section the merit of labor or general utility.

Datos topográficos, históricos y económicos sobre los productos, colonias, empresas, comercio, rentas nacionales, deuda pública, inmigración, ciudades, provincias, instituciones, ferro-carriles, bancos, escuelas y literatura de las Repúblicas Argentina, Oriental y Paraguay Buenos Aires, 1876. In 1861 the Mulhall brothers founded the , which next year became a daily; it was the preferred newspaper of the community and claimed to be the only English-language daily newspaper to be published south of the equator. The Mulhall Brothers

The want of a good map cannot be supplied until volume II. The list of foreign residents cost immense toil, yet has some defects. Moreover Mr Kemsley gives a narrative of his native country, and Messrs Cranwell and Towers have lent us some service.

The new dictionary of statistics; a complement to the fourth edition of Mulhall's of statistics, Webb, Augustus Duncan, Mulhall, Michael George 1836

PREFACE As this may be termed the first book published in English, in that part of the New world South of the Equator, the best preface will be a history of its complement. Mulhall led to the publication of the outstanding series of four English-language editions of the Handbooks of the River Plate.
