Likewise the need to share understandings about developments occurring in service is recognised, but remains a difficult task in a climate of competing demands.. Throughout the 1980s increasing emphasis has been placed on community care DHSS 1986, DoH, 1990 ; based on the notion that care in the clients normal everyday surroundings is of greater benefit than institutionalised care. Midwifery associations could play a key role in generating political action and advocating for improved midwifery services.
