Although there are two extreme principles of international taxation, in reality countries adopt a mixture of the two. Hamada, American Finance Association David Kendrick, American Economic Association Ben E. An interesting observation made at the conference is that domestic political considerations were such an important element that international issues hardly surfaced in any of the four countries when decisions were being made.

Seike, Atsushi 1954

Since it takes time for corporate managers or owners particularly foreigners to make decisions on FDI, one might say that there must be better specifications with regard to the time lag. This issue is particularly relevant for newly industrialized economies that wish to attract capital inflow on the one hand, while reducing unnecessary tax incentives on the other hand.
