

Exhibition of English drawings and watercolours.

P. & D. Colnaghi & Co. - Spooning with drawings: William Spooner bought English watercolours and drawings in a golden age of collecting, but, as an exhibition at Somerset House, London, reveals, he played disappointingly safe.

It is an interesting point, if somewhat laboured, that makes the visitor look more intently. It reveals what it means to be a reflective creative practitioner, whether working alone, in collaboration with others, with digital technology or doing research, and what we can learn from listening and observing closely.

Past Exhibition: Drawings and Watercolors of Thomas Rowlandson

The practitioners featured in this book represent a broad spectrum of interdisciplinary creative activities producing works in film, music, drama, dance and interactive installations.

British Watercolours

Genre scenes are represented in such drawings as the unusual John Augustus Atkinson watercolour called The Slack Rope c. The breadth of his achievement includes figures in landscape settings, architectural studies, seascapes, subject paintings, and studies after old masters. A collection built in such a subjective way omits the dramatic and the quirky and instead plumps for the predictable and the tame.

British Watercolours

Essays explore the unresolved tension between artistic aspirations and commercial interest - a tension that has come to shape Britain's national artistic tradition - from the perspectives of artists, dealers and super- collectors, and the upwardly mobile middle classes whose consumerism gave rise to the British art market as it is known today. The scope of ARTbibliographies Modern extends from artists and movements beginning with Impressionism in the late 19th century, up to the most recent works and trends in the late 20th century.

Past Exhibition: Drawings and Watercolors of Thomas Rowlandson

In the 18th and 19th centuries, British artists were using watercolours to capture their surroundings as they had never done before.

The accompanying publication illustrates the whole collection and includes, with other essays, a biography of Spooner. There are several views of London: for example the city from Greenwich by Cozens and a drawing given to John Varley in the catalogue but now thought to be a copy after a watercolour by David Cox. The collection initially consisted of a small group of British paintings but was carefully augmented in the early 1980s with British watercolours and American landscape paintings, with the intention of developing a group of works that would reveal the transatlantic exchange of ideas that took place during the late 18th and early 19th centuries.
