Francesco di Marco Datini da Prato c 13351410 Tuscan Merchant

When he died, Datini asked that all his papers be preserved in his house, and in 1870 they were found, a little worm-eaten and mouse-nibbled but largely intact, in a sack under the stairs. Mazzei--who founded a winemaking dynasty that continues to this day, and whose distant descendant Filippo Mazzei was a close friend of Thomas Jefferson--was constantly reminding Datini of his duties as a Christian, and at length succeeded in persuading him to leave the bulk of his vast fortune to the poor.

VI centennial celebration of Francesco Datini's death

Nel 1348, a causa della terribile pestilenza, rimane orfano di entrambi i genitori e passa sotto la tutela di Piero di Giunta del Rosso e le amorevoli cure di monna Piera di Pratese Boschetti che sempre lo amò come un figlio.

The Merchant of Prato, Francesco Di Marco Datini, 1335

He became always more richer and well respected, dealer of miscellaneous merchandise, wheat, wool, leather, clothing and valuable goods; in Prato he founded a wool mill and a dye house and in Florence a banking company.

The foundation for the poor created by Datini's will continues in Prato to this day. This cannot be through human power, but must come from God. For this reason he and others fled the areas of disease or retreated in castles in an attempt to avoid infection.
