Treaties

Throughout the world, the WCTU, which was established in the United States in 1873, campaigned for women's suffrage, in addition to ameliorating the condition of prostitutes. The other female MP at the time, of the liberal Radical Party, was a strong advocate of women's suffrage and she was the one leading the Parliament's affirmative vote. Half of the seats on municipal councils are elective, and the councils have few powers.

Political rights Women : convention between the United States of America and other government, done at New York March 31, 1953., by United States Department of State

Senator Margaret Chase Smith, a Maine Republican, was nominated for the presidency by Vermont Senator George Aiken at the Republican national convention. February 1861: National Woman's Rights Convention is held in Albany, New York.

Women's Suffrage

This extended suffrage to all taxpaying property owning women whether guild members or not, but excluded married women and the majority of unmarried women, as married women were defined as legal minors, and unmarried women were minors unless they applied for legal majority by royal dispensation, while widowed and divorced women were of legal majority.

When Did Slavery End in New York?

A small percentage of seats were set aside for women, so naturally those female candidates won. Harper also spoke out against substance abuse, particularly alcohol, in the Black community.
