Someone spilt a tin of pepper in the tea. Clara Tawe Jenkins, 'Madam' they call me, An old contralto with her dressing-gown on, And I sit at the window and I sing to the sea, For the sea does not notice that my voice has gone.

Quite Early One Morning : Thomas, Dylan, 1914

The prose pieces are fluid and smooth, expressing very much with very little. A mash-up of autobiographical short stories, radio broadcasts and lectures: a collection of short prose pieces with much poetry quoted as well as poetical prose by a literary and linguistic giant.
