Major Studies of Drugs and Drug Policy

The carrier decided to boost the premiums for the coming year. We also learned that while about 60 per cent of Canadians are enrolled in private drug plans primarily employer-sponsored benefit plans , these plans cover only 36 per cent of total system-wide spending on prescription drugs. Notably, governments are some of the biggest sponsors of private drug insurance plans.

Final Recommendation Statement: Illicit Drug Use in Children, Adolescents, and Young Adults: Primary Care

National pharmacare will provide businesses with much-needed relief from the high and growing cost of prescription drug insurance. No age-tested general benefit for children or youth. And although it will be a challenging transformation—all great national projects are—it will give Canadians and future generations a public prescription drug plan that is effective, fair and sustainable; one that shares the cherished Canadian values that are embedded in universal health care.

A Prescription for Canada: Achieving Pharmacare for All

Prescribers and patients should be better supported with information reinforcing the safety, efficacy and benefits of biosimilars. Part-time and contract workers will, many for the first time, be entitled to prescription drug benefits.
