It is used for coagulation tests, requiring full draw. The gauge of the intravenous catheter should be 18 gauge and the blood should be administered with normal saline using a Y infusion set that is specifically used for the administration of blood and blood products.

Blood Order Recipients

You may want to keep a bandage on for a few hours.

Blood Disorders

The intravenous tubing, the blood filter, the blood bag with its remaining contents are retained and sent to the laboratory. Although rare, a delayed, rather than an acute and immediate, hemolytic reaction can occur up to about 4 weeks after the transfusion.
