The socioeconomic impact of such political dynamics is amply documented in the movements of accepted inequality indices during those years. The slope of the regression line between the shoreline positions at each transect is reported as the change rate equation 2. Detection of Coastal Erosion Hotspots in Accra, Ghana.

The less sediment depletes quickly before reaching the Cape leading to the removal from the Cape onwards to compensate for the loss, hence the recession of the Cape after the construction of the Dam. The rates were calculated along transects that were cast along the entire shoreline using weighted linear regression.

Quantitative Analysis of Shoreline Change Using Medium Resolution

Other factors such as increasing pressure on the scarce land in the area, sand mining and mangrove harvesting in the area have been blamed for making the coast more vulnerable to erosion.

Thereafter, the rates indicate more accretion to the west of the site and erosion to the east. But have the rationalizations matched reality in our post-EDSA Philippines? The land is bounded in north by the Keta Lagoon and the south by the Gulf of Guinea. Similarly, the Gini index of 0.
