ILMU HADIS SISWA edited januari 2015

Praise be to God alone.

What has survived as the earliest examples of Arabic literary compositions consists of a highly elaborate system of poetic composition and a series of oratorical and often homiletic utterances, all couched in language of a variety and at a level that was to be later reflected in the style of the Qur'anic revelations themselves. Sekiranya Engkau berkenan, kumohon pertemuan ini bisa segera berlangsung.

With the passage of time, elements from these two strands were blended into a unified tradition of the Arabic love poem; images from the 'Udhri repertoire were particularly favoured by the Sufi poets in their mystical verses. The similarities between the suras, particularly the earlier ones, of the Qur'an and these other types of homiletic texts were tactfully ignored for several centuries, leaving the phenomenon of sajj' in a kind of critical limbo—heavily utilized but historically unanalyzed.

ILMU HADIS SISWA edited januari 2015

Beginning in the 1950s, a great deal of committed literature was penned by Arab writers; topics such as the Palestinian people provided a natural focus for such writing, but the goals of the Arab peoples and their individual nation-states—establishing a sense of identity, for instance, and developing balanced relationships with Western countries—involved, more often than not, the active involvement of creative writers and critics within the cultural apparatus of the different regimes. These firm injunctions are an expression of Islamic orthodoxy, but the very number of poetic divans that contain sections devoted to wine poetry illustrates the extent to which poetry could be used to confront such religious attitudes. Its contents are the primary basis for the formulation of Islamic law and the designation of conduct by Muslims, both as individuals and as a community.
