Definition and Examples of Text in Language Studies

The point of the analogy is that in order for speech production and understanding to proceed smoothly and rapidly, it may well be the case that we access ready-made patterns and preformed chunks, which have been learned in their specific detail, even though these larger units could be assembled in accordance with general principles.

Cognitive Linguistics

Stylistics : A resource book for students. This now includes both pre-existing and perceived similarity between phenomena comparison , and interaction between conceptual structures interaction , as is, for instance, summarized by Kövecses 2002 in his cognitive-linguistic introduction to the field.

Feminist Literary Criticism Defined

Structural analysis means dissecting each linguistic level: phonetic, morphological, syntactic, and discourse, to the smallest units. The cognitive-linguistic view argues in particular that it has taken over from the conceptualization prevailing in the 1960s, of metaphor as necessarily involving grammatical deviance, research showing that many metaphorical expressions in language are not deviant but rather are the norm.

Definition and Examples of Text in Language Studies

Embodying or Undercutting Stereotypes Feminist literary criticism recognizes that literature both reflects and shapes stereotypes and other cultural assumptions.

Linguistics

A classical view of meaning is that the meaning of a word, inflection or grammatical category must be a single definition that will cover all and only the appropriate uses of the word or category. This focus on language documentation was partly motivated by a concern to document the rapidly disappearing languages of indigenous peoples.
