Pushkin's shifting poetics: deceptive subtexts in v

According to Kabbalah, in the process of Creation, the divine light was splintered into sparks that descended to the depths of the lower worlds, in order to deposit in the shells of earthly things the kernels of attraction to the higher worlds.

The U of MT

Pasternak studied historical sources for the play, as he had for his epic poems and for Doktor zhivago.

Mandelshtam, Osip Emilevich

Very likely Pushkin wanted to show that the relationship between form and content was arbitrary at least to the writer who can shape any form to suit his purposes.

Ph.D. Reading List

The most gifted ambassadors of the Formalists abroad were Viktor Shklovsky, during the time he spent as an émigré in Berlin, and Roman Jakobson while in Czechoslovakia where he arrived as a Soviet citizen, but decided eventually not to return to Moscow. .

Tymanov's script in fact also incorporates elements from Gogol's 'Nevsky Prospect' and 'How Ivan Ivanovich Quarrelled with Ivan Nikiforovich' in order to create a fictional youth for Akakii Akakievich, before reverting in its second part to a more 'faithful' rendition of the story. The split between these two forms of Jewish religious mentality appeared in Russia toward the close of the eighteenth century, as the countermovements of Hasidism and Talmudism. Arriving there in January 1906, they stayed in Germany for eight months.

It is not so much the case that the establishment of a differentiated reality is less problematic in the textual medium than it is in the visual--cinema habitually uses variations on 'dream sequences', stylistically marked to a greater or lesser degree, in order to achieve this-but rather that it is more difficult in the cinema to obscure the boundaries between different levels of reality, to destabilize the viewer's perception of the 'realness' of different sequences without undermining the narrative altogether. . Although Pasternak was ill, he was forced to go, together with the writer Isaak Emmanuilovich Babel, because their Parisian hosts insisted on their presence and that of some other liberal writers.

Pasternak, Boris (29 January [10 February, New Style] 1890

Although they preferred to send him to a German school in Moscow, they knew that graduation with a gold medal the equivalent of receiving an A in every subject from a state gymnasium was a prerequisite for Jews to study at Moscow University without being subject to a 3 percent admissions quota.

Ůrij Nikolaevič Tynânov (1894

Their first apartment was on Tverskaia Street, near the old Triumphal Gate. Jakobson, who participated in both discourses, was rather exceptional in a landscape where these two discursive formations remained estranged in their cohabitation. .
