Philosophical Questions: Their Nature and Function

Also, if we do not have an experience of the philosophical problem that is being explored, then the questions raised, the discussion carried out and the resolutions suggested will be meaningless to us. It is mainly this pseudo-Occamian idea that leads us to be, not happy as kings as Robert Louis Stevenson suggested but puzzled that the world is so full of a number of things.

A Philosophical Enquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful

The principal questions are, What should I do? But as pain is stronger in its operation than pleasure, so death is in general a much more affecting idea than pain; because there are very few pains, however exquisite, which are not preferred to death; nay, what generally makes pain itself, if I may say so, more painful, is, that it is considered as an emissary of this king of terrors.

Mauris ultricies tincidunt elit, sit amet lacinia nisi vehicula vel. The ideas of pain, sickness, and death, fill the mind with strong emotions of horror; but life and health, though they put us in a capacity of being affected with pleasure, they make no such impression by the simple enjoyment. But to what end, in many cases, this was designed, I am unable to discover; for I see no greater reason for a connection between man and several animals who are attired in so engaging a manner, than between him and some others who entirely want this attraction, or possess it in a far weaker degree.

But when the object of the painting or poem is such as we should run to see if real, let it affect us with what odd sort of sense it will, we may rely upon it, that the power of the poem or picture is more owing to the nature of the thing itself than to the mere effect of imitation, or to a consideration of the skill of the imitator however excellent. Satyendra Bose, a reputed Indian scientist proposed to Einstein that if matter was cooled to very low temperatures Absolute Kelvin- minus 273 degrees then the entropy of that matter should decrease and matter should come down to a zero energy state.

Who am I? A philosophical inquiry

Therefore closing the eyes helps in the process of concentration.
