Canada's Métis & Non

In the Northwest Territories Métis represented 8. For all these processes, there will be need for significant First Nations-led work to establish relevant, culturally-based indicators and to gather and share national-level statistics.

Storm Russell

The case is now before the Supreme Court. This is especially true for lower-level geographic areas where a particular Indian reserve or Indian settlement was incompletely enumerated for the 2016 Census and enumerated for the 2011 Census and vice versa. Its survey research and First Nations Data Centre embody OCAP® at its full implementation.

Indigenous Terminology

Although there is much variation in quality of relationships between First Nations and provincial governments, there are a growing number of tripartite or bilateral agreements with provinces and territories that entail data- or information-sharing agreements.

Our History

COO and the Institute for Clinical Evaluative Sciences ICES have a Data Governance Agreement that enables ICES to carry out health-related analyses for COO and the First Nations communities that COO supports and for whom it advocates. In recent years, four Inuit land claims have been signed across Inuit Nunangat.

Statistics on Indigenous peoples

For an entire generation, the FNIGC and its regional partners have tirelessly promoted the importance of relevant, high quality, accessible data created by and for First Nations. There are 404,000 Métis, according to the 2006 census. National Collaborating Centre for Aboriginal Health.
