U.S. GAO

Organization leaders must make strategy come alive by providing their staff a consistently vivid strategic narrative that is relevant to their day-to-day activities. Lean estimating and forecasting techniques are lightweight and provide needed adaptability to constantly changing conditions while still providing critical reporting and accountability.

Government at Work: Best Practices and Model Programs

Laptop computers, e-mail, SharePoint sites, communities of practice, LiveMeeting capability, and other technology tools allow teleworkers to communicate and share information with colleagues across the country and around the globe. These include people whose jobs might change — police, social workers, etc.

Four Steps to High

Without that continuing attention, you may find yourself having to do your work all over again the next time a need for a new service or initiative arises.

Government by design: Four principles for a better public sector

Local colleges and universities may have researchers looking at just what you're concerned with, or know others who are. A body of knowledge BOK or BoK is the complete set of concepts, terms and activities that make up a professional domain, as defined by the relevant community of professionals or professional association. Both short-term stabilization activities and longer-term institutional capacity building initiatives are designed to bolster state legitimacy, which is crucial to achieving governance reform.

Public-sector organizations are, of course, quite different from private-sector companies. The European arm of a diversified manufacturer aims to avoid organizational disconnects by maintaining a small group of geographic and topic experts who help the business units with priority issues, project by project. Best practice often includes a strategic sequencing of these two efforts: using stabilization programs to set the foundation upon which longer-term capacity development can build.
