Rather than having one body charged with oversight over the law, the Clerk of the House, the Secretary of the Senate, and the Comptroller General of the United States General Accounting Office GAO monitored compliance, which made enforcement difficult. All must face the problem of the role and influence of money in politics, but each answers this problem with different values and policies. Stevens predicted that if the public believes that corporations dominate elections, disaffected voters will stop participating.

Campaign Finance Reform

In , the Roberts Court struck down a key provision of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act BCRA that limited independent political expenditures made by corporations, associations, and labor unions. In addition to preventing outright corruption, campaign finance regulation thus seeks to limit the undue influence of money in politics.
