Smoking and Health: Report of the Advisory Committee to the Surgeon General of the United States

This report estimates how many individuals in the United States have gained additional years of life from 1964 through 2012 as a result of tobacco control—influenced decisions to quit smoking or to never start. In addition, there is uncertainty in the estimates of relative risk used in computing the mortality rates and in the actual smoking rates derived from NHIS, although these are large surveys with precise estimates.

Smoking and Health: Report of the Advisory Committee to the Surgeon General ...

Neither smoking nor smoking cessation are associated with the risk of cancer of the breast. Both the number of smokers in the household and the hours exposed at work were associated with increased serum cotinine levels among nonsmokers.
