To infer the identity of the facts from the points of agreement in the narratives, and then the discrepancy in the statements regarding it from their disagreement in other points, which simply shows the facts to be distinct, is to construct a self-contradictory argument. The great proof, which was insisted upon, of the existence of the Jehovist as distinct from the Elohist, and supplementing the treatise of the latter, lay in THE UNITY OF THE PENTATEUCH 79 the diversity of style and thought which are alleged to characterize these two classes of sections respectively.

This is a modification of the Supplementary by increasing the number engaged in supplementing from one to a series successively operating at distinct periods. This extraordinary condition of things led to many seeming departures from the Mosaic requirements, which have been alleged to show that the law was not then in existence. It is alleged that when these component parts of Genesis are separated and examined apart, each will be found to be characterized by all the marks which indicate diversity of origin and authorship.
