William Shakespeare

A historian of the early modern stage as in Documents of the Rose Playhouse , she is also engaged with writing contemporary theatre history see theatre review articles in Shakespeare Survey 63 - 68 , and she uses theatre records to write about the material remains of performance posters, props, costumes; objects that 'remember' performance. The conversation about the sun and moon, so often seen as a pivotal turning point in the taming is then delivered with a befuddled Petruchio apparently genuinely unsure whether he is looking at the sun or the moon, and a worried Katherina trying to placate him.
