McIntyre, Minister of Public Works Hon. In addition to the purely economic income replacement aspect, maternity benefits, like regular benefits, would ensure continued employability and reintegration into the labour market. From the examples cited it may be suggested that the 'conference' occupies a keystone position in arching together the states-and commonwealth into a practical and workable constitution which functions in a 120 manner the designers hardly anticipated.

The Constitution does not expressly give the provinces that authority, but this does not mean that it is unconstitutional for them to do this. Because social programs come within provincial and territorial jurisdiction, the right to opt out amounts to a political compromise by the federal government that enables the provinces and territories to exercise the autonomy given to them by the Constitution for developing and delivering numerous social programs. Lewis Smith, Minister of Agriculture The delegation from the Provinces included the following officials and advisors: From Ontario Mr.
