Read The Living House Online by Roxana Waterson

The Tongkonan custom house has been listed as a UNESCO world cultural heritage site since 2010. A picture is produced of how people shape buildings and buildings shape people, as rules about layout and the uses of space are shown to have a remarkable impact on social relationships.

The Living House: An Anthropology of Architecture in South

I have read some reports for studies from other researcher about this thing, it were always so strict. Construction was ideally of stone but could be brick sculpted with stucco. That would be more interesting to see than an old town replica that looks like an abandoned theme park.
