The paper doesn't go to press for the first London edition till eleven. I'll be able to take a larger flat; when Janet knows of it, she'll return, she'll never leave me.

Stamboul Train by Graham Greene, First Edition

Czinner, the dreamer who embraced Communism hoping to improve the lives of the poor workers in Belgrade, the man who ran away to England when the chief of police started a personal vendetta against him, the atheist who thirsts for faith, the lost soul in search of redemption that is the closest I can come to describe as a typical Greene hero. But when she was seated next Isaacs in the front of the car she turned and gave him a long smile, saying: 'I've come out without a card, but my name's Stein. In the silly season he'd have got half a column among the mermaids and sea-horses.
