Policy on working in partnership with parents

In addition to supporting student learning directly, partnerships can have additional benefits to students and their families. Given this, the high prevalence of out-of-school suspensions in our schools — even for non-violent behaviors — is a serious concern. What Makes Us Unique The Partnership is one of the largest, in-district public school transformation organizations in the United States.

National Standards for Family

Partners provide vital in-kind services and supports, as well as real dollars, which add significant value to the work of 21st Century Community Learning Centers.

Spellings, reading and mathematical activities are included as homework. By 2010, the 3,450 funded grantees engaged over 30,000 partners, with an average of almost 9 partners per grantee. This basic fact should be a guiding principle as we think about how schools should be organized and how children should be taught.

Home/School Partnerships / Home/School Partnerships

Formal Consultation Evenings are held in the autumn and summer terms for parents to discuss with teachers any issues arising from their child's School Report or other aspects of school life. For-profit corporations and school districts were the second and third most utilized partners, with colleges and universities also playing a main partnership role.

Policies & Procedures

When parents and teachers work well together, everyone benefits.

Strengthening Home, School, & Community Partnership: Improving Discipline Policies in American Schools

The more you familiarize yourself with the daily routines and activities at preschool, the more you'll be able to encourage this type of conversation. There are the traditional ways: encouraging children to complete homework, attending parent-teacher conferences, and being active members of their school's parent-teacher organization. Used with the supporting resources, it can help organizers educate their communities about the importance of family involvement and direct the development of effective partnerships.
