Thomas Traherne

Seeing therefore all satisfactions are near at hand, by going further we do but leave them; and wearying ourselves in a long way round about, like a blind man, forsake them. Marks and Guffey Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1968.

Traherne Dynasty

There we see joyful Patriarchs, expecting Saints, Prophets ministering Apostles publishing, and Doctors teaching, all Nations centering, and Angels praising.

Thomas Traherne: Centuries of Meditations

Educated at Brasenore College, Oxford, he graduated with a B.

Thomas Traherne: Centuries of Meditations

Let our souls have communion with Thy soul, and let the eye of our mind enter into Thine. He was ordained deacon in 1812, and priest in 1813, both times by Richard Beadon, Bishop of Bath and Wells. Wilt thou not live unto Him? And by how much the more vile I have been, let my love be so much, O Lord, the more violent henceforth, and fervent unto Thee.

Traherne Name Meaning, Family History, Family Crest & Coats of Arms

Do not your inclinations tell you that the World is yours? Socrates, perhaps, being an heathen, knew not that all things proceeded from God to man, and by man returned to God: but we that know it must need all things as God doth, that we may receive them with joy, and live in His image. They despise them merely because they have them: And invent ways to make themselves miserable in the presence of riches.

Work info: Centuries of Meditations

Where Love administers physic, its tenderness is expressed in balms and cordials.

Traherne Name Meaning, Family History, Family Crest & Coats of Arms

The first performance of the cantata was delayed until 1946 because of the Second World War. However, the surname is believed to be descended from Traherne Trahaearn ap Caradog son of Caradoc, Prince of North in 1073. I admire to see Thy cross in every understanding, Thy passion in every memory Thy crown of thorns in every eye, and Thy bleeding, naked wounded body in every soul.

Thomas Traherne: Centuries of Meditations

It is through her love of Traherne that I have recently become re-acquainted with the unusual story of the tender-hearted poet priest who writes with an innocent and mystical clarity that echoes Herbert and Vaughan and points forward to Wordsworth, Blake and Hopkins.
