The Ghost Towns of Lake Marion

The ideal would be a waterway that connected the two rivers so that goods could be hauled from the Upstate to Charleston completely by water. We were able to find relatively safe landing on the leeward side of the island and set off to explore.

Decoding the Woodwork of White Hall: A Network of Enslaved Carpenters and French Huguenots

Leiding asserts that Isaac Porcher was in the Charleston area by 1687, settling first near Goose Creek, in lower Berkeley County. They usually stood near fireplaces. According to one worker, Bill Fletcher... Their idea was to cut the trees down, get the stumps, and tops, and everything out.

Sunken Plantations on Apple Books

There were cars parked in the lot, and it turned out that a service was in session. Marion is sponsored by the Swamp Fox Murals Trial Society.

Plantations, Pond Bluff

South Carolinians have long desired a route for water navigation from Columbia to Charleston.

Sunken plantations / Santee Cooper project

The research on our site and its op-ed summary highlight the several key spending decisions that Santee Cooper made before, during, and after the V. His daughter Ann recounted the day the British arrived. I have a complete history of the SRCLCo story but no publisher interested.
