Harmony

Located just across North Main Street from the Roofless Church, the park consists of a stand of evergreens on elevated ground surrounding a walkway. Any musical novice, journeyman, or master would benefit from the experience that this book offers.

New Harmony, Indiana

Other types of harmony are based upon the intervals of the chords used in that harmony. In New Harmony work was divided into six departments, each with its own superintendent.

Harmony

The Harmonist community continued to thrive during the 1820s, but correspondence from March 6, 1824, between Rapp and his adopted son, Frederick, indicates that the Harmonists planned to sell their Indiana property and were already looking for a new location.
