Great German Art Exhibition

With a strong lean toward the Degenerates, the Neue show heavy-handedly yet effectively underscores its message of oppression and terror in a long hallway with a photograph of a Nazi rally covering the entire wall on one side and a group of camp prisoners on the other. His new task: to spin his once-beloved artists as madmen and head a commission to purge state collections and museums, confiscating 5,238 works within two weeks. Designed to inflame public opinion against modernism, the exhibition subsequently traveled to several other cities in Germany and.
