Club History

As already mentioned, he came into the Irish side as a replacement against Leicestershire, with the full county side on show, for a two day match at Sydney Parade, in early July 1963. A side that had been posting totals of more than 300 without breaking a sweat was unable to adapt, stymied by Pakistan's superior use of reverse swing on the slow and abrasive surface. An exchange programme organised by CUS had led to a three-month stay in South Africa and the timing couldn't have been better.

Honours — Dublin University Cricket Club

Their fielding was particularly brilliant, a marked contrast with the hapless England team that year.

Cricket Australia had already pulled out of their scheduled tour. A successful schoolboy cricketer, Donald took some time to gain a regular place in the University XI and was only moderately successful thereafter, scoring just two competitive 50s. But by the age of three, when he first picked up a bat, Eoin - the fourth of six children - was consumed by cricket, that quintessentially English game that, in the late '80s, had a small presence in Ireland.
