Reflection of Waves

This feature is extremely powerful and has no equivalent in other conventional languages such as C, C++, Fortran, or Pascal. The absorption and re-emission process causes the higher frequency lower wavelength violet light to travel slower through crown glass than the lower frequency higher wavelength red light.

Reflection

The doubling of pressure gives a 6 decibel increase in the signal picked up by the microphone. For instance for some types of glass, the n value for frequencies of violet light is 1.
